

Caleb Elfenbein is Associate Professor in the Departments of History and Religious Studies at Grinnell College, where he is also Director of the Center for the Humanities. His work explores religion, community, public life, and human welfare in different times and places. He has published on these themes as they relate to life in Egypt, South Asia, and the United States. He is author of Fear in Your Heart: What Islamophobia Can Tell Us about Public Life in Today's America (forthcoming NYU Press) and is editor of MappingIslamophobia.org.
