

Babak Rahimi is the Director of the Program for the Study of Religion at the Department of Literature, University of California San Diego. His monograph, Theater-State and Formation of the Early Modern Public Sphere in Iran: Studies on Safavid Muharram Rituals, 1590-1641 C.E. (Brill 2011), traces the origins of the Iranian public sphere in the early-seventeenth century Safavid Empire with a focus on the relationship between state-building, urban space and ritual culture. Rahimi is also the co-editor (David Faris) of Social Media in Iran (SUNY Press 2015), coeditor (Armando Salvatore and Roberto Tottoli) of The Wiley Blackwell History of Islam (Wiley Blackwell 2018), and co-editor (Peyman Eshaghi) of Muslim Pilgrimage in the Modern World (University of North Carolina Press 2019). His articles have appeared in Thesis Eleven: Critical Theory and Historical Sociology, International Political Science Review, International Communication Gazette, International Journal of Middle East Studies, The Middle East Journal, The Communication Review, and Journal of the International Society for Iranian Studies. Rahimi's research interests concern the relationship between culture, religion, and technology. The historical and social contexts that inspire his research range from early modern Islamic societies to the Global South.
