

Megan Adamson Sijapati is Professor and Chair of the Religious Studies Department at Gettysburg College. Her interests are religion and modernity, religion and the body, Sufism, and contemporary Islam. Her publications include “Sufi Remembrance Practices in a Meditation Marketplace of Mobile Apps” in Anthropological Perspectives on the Religious Uses of Mobile Apps (Palgrave 2019), “Muslim Belonging in Hindu South Asia: Ambivalence and Difference in Nepali Public Discourses” (Society and Culture in South Asia, 2018), and the books Islamic Revival in Nepal: Religion and a New Nation (Routledge 2011), Religion and Modernity in the Himalaya (co-editor, Routledge 2016), and Muslim Communities and Cultures of the Himalaya: Conceptualizing the Global Ummah (co-editor, Routledge 2020 forthcoming). She is currently working on a book on religion and the body. Megan is Co-Chair of the Religion and Body program unit at the American Academy of Religion and she serves on the South Asian Muslim Studies Association’s Executive Board and the Association for Asian Studies’ South Asia Council.